Fatal Result of Yesterday's Storm.

The thunder storm yesterday, besides doing damage to property about town, resulted fatally to one individual. About 1:15 o'clock, in the fury of the storm, a colored woman named Ann Bris-coc was instantly killed by a stroke of lightning. Ann and her husband have lived in a shanty at the foot of Eighteenth street west, on the towpath of the eld canal. Near the house is a small temporary shed, crected by a tall locust tree, and it was under this that Ann was engaged at the time of her death in sifting flour. The bolt struck the topmost branch of the tree, and passing down shattered a few of the limbs and passed under the shed, breaking a small piece out of the side of a pail, killing the woman instantly, and entering the ground, throwing up the dirt. Her husband, who was sifting outside of the shed at work calking, heard a loud report like a gun explosion, but had no idea of what had occurred until his little daughter ran to him and told him that her mother was dead. The woman was stricken to the ground, but bore no mark, whatever, except a slight Ann and her husband have lived in a shanty at was dead. The woman was stricken to the ground, but bore no mark, whatever, except a slight scorching at the back of her head. She was a woman about thirty years of age, and very powerful. The story of her death soon got abroad, and a great many flocked to the house to witness the unusual sight of a person killed by a stroke of lightning. Coroner Patterson viewed the body and gave a certificate of death in accordance with the circumstances.

AMUSEMENTS.

An intelligent and critical audience witnessed the first appearance of the rising young tragedi-dienne, Miss Mary Anderson, upon the Washingon stage, and from the reception at the National theatre last evening of her Evadne her engage-ment in this city is destined to be one continued evation. The tragedy of "Evadue" is fine, and in Miss Anderson's portrayal of the title role she leaves no room for doubt in the minds of the most leaves no room for doubt in the minds of the most critical as to her great possibilities. Without straining for effect, she shows herself adequate to every situation of the true feeling, intensity, pathos and swectness of the character, while she appears thoroughly in sympathy with her role, and interprets its fine sentiment in a delicate and beautiful manner. Miss Anderson's voice has not that soft, sympathetic tone which one would expect from the refinement and delicacy of her features, but her personal appearance is in her favor. She is well supported at the National, and her first appearance before a Washington audience was in the highest degree successful.

The tragedy of "Evadne," it is said, was many years ago a training-ground for the tragic queens. It had been shelved for years before Mary Anderson took it up. It teems with bright memories for old play-goers, and the neglect it has recently suffered gives it novelty for the new people that have come. It therefore possesses two qualities of attraction to present audiences, and in Miss Anderson's hands suggests that the old love for the neglected queens can be revived by an awakening touch of power. With adequate embodiment they are as truly alive as ever and only await the breathing in of a great dramate spirit such as Miss Anderson brings to them.

To-night will be produced the latest Parisian sensation, performed at the Theatre Francais two consecutive seasons, "Berthe, the Daughter of Roland," a four set play from the French of critical as to her great possibilities. Without consecutive seasons, "Berthe, the Daughter of Roland," a four act play from the French of Henri Bornier, translated by a lady of Baltimore, and performed in that city last week with great success. The story of Berthe is the off-shoot of many of the traditions of the age of caivalry, and the play is new, chaste, rich in striking dramatic effect, grandeur and glowing heroic language, while the plot is subtle, unique and sympathetic.

Semething More About the Charges. Washington, May 10, 1876. To the Editor of the National Republican: Sir: Senator Morton made a statement in his place some days since respecting the loan of $250, 00, advanced to him as Governor of India 1853, to carry forward military operations in that State, and gave a history of the circumstances rundering it necessary, and also the condition of the State and of the Democratic party at that time. I take the liberty of raising my humble voice in nfirmation of the Senator's statement, as I had the privilege of being at that time a Repul member of the House of Representatives of Indi amous "Military Bill." which the Democrats had submitted, and were trying to pass, and upon the engrossment of which we were compelled to break a quorum. The constitution of Indiana constituted the Governor commander-in-chief of he military forces of the State.

The Democratic party of Indiana were making extraordinary efforts to oripple Governor Morton's efforts in alding the General Government in suppressing the rebellion, and their leaders in the efforts in aiding the General Government in suppressing the rebellion, and their leaders in the House were denouncing the administrations of President Linceln and Governor Morton, and endeavoring to wean their party from a loyal and cordial support of the General Government. Of these things I am cegnizant.

Now, this famous Military Bill caused a quorum to be broken, and the result was that the State was left without the necessary appropriations of the State, and the State government generally; and, as Senator Morton has stated, many counties of the State advanced to him funds from their treasuries by vote of their commissioners. I know, at my own instance, the commissioners of the county I had the honor to represent met in special session, and by unanimous vote advanced what they could for the purpose of enabling the Governor to carry on the State government, and take care of her unfortunate population, viz: the bilind, the insane and the deaf and dumb who were in her asylums. The necessity for all this, and which has given rise to unjust attacks upon Senator Morton's character and course, had its origin in the manifest antagonism presented by the Democratic leaders of Indiana towards the patriotic efforts and untiring energies of the President and the Governor in "keeping step to the murle of the Union."

I Section II of that Military Bill constituted the Scates.

Section 22 made it the duty of the staff officers the more of control to the fortivity in the fortivity in the patriotic efforts and on the fortivity of the staff officers.

Major and Brigadier Generals of the State.

Section 22 made it the duty of the staff officers of the major general thus appointed to forthwith call in all the arms, military accourtements and munitions of war-belonging to the State, and when called in they were to be kept in a safe place and in good order by the assistant quartermaster general, on the staff of the major general, and issued by him in accordance with directions from the officers of State. by him in accordance with directions from the offi-cers of State.

These officers of State, who were to compose that military board, were just then all Democrats. It course the major general and brigadiers would have been of like faith and order, as all their staff and subordinates would have been also.

Can any one fail to see the direful results which would have followed had that infamous bill passed? Gov. Morton would have been shorn of his constitutional power as commander-in-chief of the military forces, and without arms, without money, he would have been at the morey of the disloyal clement; treason would have shown

Thomas A. Hendricks did go so far as to make a speech about a Northwestern Confederacy, which was, however, only a sympathetic feeler toward leasening the Union bonds and 'badling toward the ninal result of secession. We were standing ever a volcano during all that session of 1883, and the efforts, courage and partorism of Oliver P. Merton were powerful in preventing its outbreak.

Untiring in his efforts to support the authority of the General Government, to save his own State from anarchy and bloodhed, sleepiess in his vigiliance in looking after the interests of those of her sons who were rallying around the Stars and Striper, no wonder he was the central object of hatred of every disloyal man in Indiana, and the focus toward which the love of every soldier of the Union and every loyal citizen of the State the Union and every loyal citizen of the State ended.
The Republic of the United States will never de

The Republic of the United States will never do her duty, or properly show her gratitude for patriotism, energy or vigilance, until she calls upon Oliver P. Morton to take charge of the helm of State. Many have done nobly, but his name, like Abou Ben Adem's, leads all the rest. I am not surprised that the Haltimore Neurs should attack his speech and motives, but when it says, "will not Indiana be as much surprised as the rest of the country to learn that Morton alone kept her in the Union against the votes and feelings of a majority of her people," let me answer, that Indiana's majority was loyal to the Union, but I have serious doubts that her Democratic leaders were, or they would not have desired and pressed the passage of a bill which was grossly unconstitutional, grossly insulting to the chief magistrate of the State, and the effect of which would have been to have placed her in the hands of men who were denouncing President Lincoln's policy in behalf of the Union. I have been informed that John Morgan, I have been informed that John Morgan, o Kentucky, was in Indianapolis, was in the lobby of the House of Representatives watching the progress of events, watching the ball that our Democratic friends had set in motion so that when the plot had ripened and when the Demo-cratic military board of Indiana had secured all the arms and munitions of war and put them out the arms and inunitions of war and put them out of reach of Indiana's loyal Governor and her loyal population, he could step over from Ken-tucky and aid the Southern Confederacy without ndrance. These are not fables to us who passed through

These are not fables to us who passed through the agonics of 1863 in Indiana. And shall we fall now to stand by and support to the utmost the official character of the most vigitant Executive we ever had, and whose patriotism, and whose intellectual ability, are sources of pride to every Hoosier, and which are second to those of no man in the nation? My revered father, who sleeps in an honored Union grave, marched under that old flag of the Union at North Point, in defense of Baltimore, in 1813, and I, a native of Maryland, but for twenty-five years an adopted son of Indiana, appeal with pride to my native State and the whole Union to recognific the patriotism, the ability, the energy my native State and the whole Union to recognize the patriotism, the ability, the energy of one who has stood so conspicuously prominent in behalf of the interests of this whole nation, to put at rest the malicious attacks upon his motives, character and official career, and to show the gratitude that is due him by making him the successor of the hero of Appomattox, and the Centennial Chief Magistrate of the nation.
